Grown Up Kids Remember When Santa Came to Carmel With Reindeer Who Could Not Keep Their Antlers On

By Irene Alexander

One needs only to thumb his way back through the yellowing newspaper files of this century's first quarter to recapture the warmth and gaiety of Carmel's early Yuletides and to dedicate one's self anew to the proposition that the good old village custom of a community Christmas celebration shall not perish from this favored strip of earth.

Ah, me, what fun was had by all!

And this in spite of the fact that matters proceeded somewhat less than smoothly in the course of Carmel's first recorded festivities, as described by Grace MacGowan Cooke in Twenty Years of Carmel, a reminiscence appearin the December 20, 1929, issue of the Pine Cone.

"We were told," explains Mrs. Cooke, who came to Carmel by stage in 1908, "that Santa Claus would come over the hill in his sledge, driving his two prancing reindeers, bringing a gift for every child in town. It was a daylight affair. Mothers were asked to bring their children, walk out to meet the saint and escort him in.

"We were to gather at the corner of Ocean and San Carlos, where the old watering trough stood then. From there we streamed on up San Carlos toward the town where the road comes from Monterey down the hill. Every mother and child in Carmel must have been out, for we were quite a big crowd. Jingle-jingle-jingle! Santa's sleighbells! The youngsters went wild. The jingling was coming nearer. It sounded in irregular bursts; and there was some rather irregular shouting up above there. Had something gone wrong? No. As we looked, there swung around the last turn the sledge, Santa standing up in it. We could hear him calling to his team, encouraging them, we supposed, with, 'On, Prancer! On, Dancer!'

"But what he was really yelling was: 'Hey! Whoa! Whoa, there!' For the noble antlers on Prancer's head—or it may have been Dancer's — w e r e slipping. They slewed around and over one eye. He kicked. His team mate took a hand—or a hoof—in the affair. The reindeers were running away.

"The children scattered as the kicking, plunging team came dragging the yawing sledge toward them, Santa yelling, trying to stop the runaways. He couldn't do it, but they did it themselves. They swerved out to one side and ran full pelt one on each side of a little pine tree. Santa hopped out, sputtering t h r o u g h his cotton whiskers, 'All right, the toys are distributed!' (They were, all over the road.) 'Every kid grab what he can,' advised the genial saint, and the scramble was on.

"The reindeers stood revealed as the Peake donkeys, with a pair of antlers fastened to each of their heads. They didn't like the sleighbells much, but Joe Hand, of beloved memory, who was our Santa, had managed to hold them all right till those antlers slipped."

The three carolers above are Carl Bensberg, Jaffrey Harris and Allen Knight who will be the leading spirits in the big Business Association-USO Community Carol Sing at Sunset Auditorium tonight from eight to nine o'clock.

Bensberg will lead the caroling in which all Carmel and visiting service men will join. Jaffrey Harris will provide the piano accompaniment, and Allen Knight will be master of ceremonies of the super-colossal variety show if Corum Jackson, in charge of arrangements, is able to line up the acts by seven thirty when the doors open. But whether the variety show develops or not there will be a good old fashioned, typically Carmel and thoroughly enjoyable community sing. Everybody come! It's for the soldiers!

Republican Backs Dem. Woman's Club In Row Over Criticism of America Firsters in Review of "Under Cover"

Editor's Note: One of Carmel's most active Republicans takes up the cudgel for the Carmel Democratic Women's club in the following communication written in answer to Louise Rice-Carter's letter printed in last week's Pine Cone-Cymbal in which she accused the Carmel Democratic Women's club of making "libelous statements they cannot prove" in their review of the book "Under Cover" in which the America Firsters were roundly criticized. Mrs. Rice-Carter was an active member of America First before the organization disbanded.

December 23, 1943

Editor of the Pine Cone:

This country's worst enemies have always been on the home front. In the Revolutionary War we had the Tories. In the Civil War we had the Copperheads. General Grant said the enemies behind the lines gave him more trouble than Lee's armies. The long supply lines extended across states, many of whose citizens were opposed to the war. The supply lines suffered accordingly.

President Roosevelt was not far wrong when he referred to Charles Lindberg as a Copperhead. The "America First" committee did everything it possibly could to prevent our being adequately armed for the conflict anyone could see would soon be upon us. How bitterly they opposed our aid to the allies, designed to keep the fighting away from our shores! Among others, they probably contributed to Pearl Harbor by causing the Japs to think we were not prepared and would not fight.

When the war is over and the excitement has died down and we are no longer on our guard, you can depend upon "America Firsters," appeasers and the Peace and Freedom outfit to begin softening us up again. These groups do not change their pattern, and we have had them always with us. If they succeed in softening us up sufficiently, World War III will be upon us.

Why? Because this is the richest, freest and happiest country in existence. And there isn't a have-not nation on earth that could get away with it.

Smith and Monroe Hear Again From War Prisoner Sons

Christmas will be brighter for Cecil "Pop" Smith and S. J. Monroe because of word received here last week of their prisoner of war sons.

The war department informed "Pop" Smith that the following short wave message from his son, Sgt. William A. Smith, who is interned in a Jap prison camp in the Philippines, had been picked up from a Jap station.

"I'm well. There's nothing to worry about. Please give my regards for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to the rest of the family and Mr. and Mrs. Lamb."

To the notice, the War Department added: "This message originated in Japan for propaganda purposes. Cannot be accepted as an official report of the War Department."

"Pop" says he has never heard his son speak of a Mr. or Mrs. Lamb.

S. J. Monroe, Carmel Valley, received his Christmas message from his son, Robert H. Monroe, also interned in the Philippines, through one of the now familiar form postcards sent out by the Imperial Japanese Army.

Both men have had previous notice that their sons are prisoners of war.

SON FOR THE PAUL MAYS'

A wire arrived this week from Philadelphia announcing the birth on Wednesday, December 22, of Jared Potter Mays, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mays.

The Editor's Column

Please, Mr. Godwin, Good and Loud

The mosquitoes are back. Not only are they back in the Mission Tract where they fought a prolonged engagement with the County Health Department throughout the summer, and won, but they have waxed so fat and aggressive that they are now infiltrating into the confines of the incorporated city.

Especially noticeable have been their activities in Eighty Acres where the more optimistic inhabitants are discussing the relative merits of citronella and pyrethrium as mosquito repellants, while the defeatists are appealing to Carmelities who have lived in Manila for expert advice on how to make mosquito curtains.

And the mosquitoes are laughing their heads off, for any combative efforts on the part of individual citizens here are predestined to be amateurish in the extreme, since as temperate zoners we are not designed by inheritance to offer a toughened hide to receive mosquito attack, nor by environment to know how to ward it off.

However, there is one source from which relief may come. When

Fortier, Mrs. Bell Give Town Handsome New Honor Roll

A surprise Christmas present for Carmel and the boys in the service who are home on leave during the holidays appeared in Fortier's window Thursday morning, a handsome new honor roll of Carmel men in the Armed Forces.

The roll, consisting of 311 names, is the work of Mrs. Frank M. Bell, who painted the plaque that serves as the backing a warm buff color, hand lettered the names in brown and painted the American eagle flanked by crossed flags that dominate the center portion of the roll, a thirty-six hour task.

George Fortier, who has donated one of his display windows for the honor roll since the first group of home town boys went into the service, furnished the materials and had the backboard made for the new roll. He has dressed the lower portion of the w i n d o w with candelabra and Christmas greenery.

When the honor roll committee failed to find time to revise the old roll, Mrs. Bell, who has done all the work on the old honor roll, anyway, undertook to make the new one. She and Mr. Fortier worked out a plan for a new plaque that would not warp, nor fade and would be so designed that additions and corrections could be made easily without spoiling the appearance of the whole. The new roll accomplishes all thes purposes, as additions can be made

By Request---Nat Peiper's Talk on Juvenile Crime

Nat Peiper, F.B.I. head, came down from San Francisco recently to speak here on juvenile delinquency under the auspices of the Carmel Parent-Teachers Association. Many parents and citizens interested in the welfare of young people who were unable to attend the talk expressed their disappointment at not finding it covered in last week's Pine Cone. We had a copy of Mr. Peiper's speech but delayed publishing it until we had space to run it without cutting. We here publish it in full.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY
By Nat Peiper

Juvenile delinquency has always been a social problem but its seriousness today is aggravated by the conditions brought about by the war.

Some of the more spectacular cases make the press, but each day's published cases are but an insight to hundreds of such tragedies affecting young people. Daily, reports come to the F.B.I. telling stories of needless suffering on the part of children as well as the grief of their parents.

The hardened criminals who come before us daily, did not become so overnight. They started on a road of lawlessness in their young, formative years. Perhaps if they had had the chance to live right, they would be respected citizens today. In those, we can only hazard on the "could have been." Remembering them, though, we must see to it that our youth of today is given the opportunity to grow up as good citizens and is prepared to face responsibilities with the pride of sound, honest Americans.

Just how serious is the problem today? Let us look at offenses among young girls based upon criminal arrest fingerprint cards received at the F.B.I. during 1942 from law enforcement agencies throughout the country. It has been computed that arrests for girls under 21 years of age increased 55.7% over the 1941 figures. Arrests of girls for drunkenness, for example, increased 39.9%, for disorderly conduct 69.6%, for prostitution and commercialized vice 64.8%, and for other sex offenses 104.7%. Arrests for offenses against common decency among girls under 21 increased 89.5% during the first six months of 1943.

Behind these figures lie many causes. Each case of a delinquent boy or girl must, of course, be studied independently. Many youngsters, it is true, suffer from mental or physical abnormalities which make it difficult for them to shoulder their responsibilities to fellow men. These young people should receive special clinical and medical treatment. But let us refer to the normal child who starts life in full possession of his mental and physical faculties and somewhere along the way of life goes astray. This child's waywardness can generally be traced to lack of proper guidance on the part of his parents.

The spectre of delinquent youth rises over homes broken by poverty, neglectful or incompetent parents, divorces, drunkenness and immorality.

What can we do about this national problem? There is no one panacea that will solve the problem overnight.

The following suggestions might prove helpful:

1. Each community should study its own local problems of delinquency and crime among youth. This is important as it will vary in each community.

2. A coordinating council should be established comprising officials as well as private agencies, which seek to direct youth along constructive lines. The council to consist of representatives of each group directly connected with youth and should coordinate a program of crime prevention so that data from each community can be gleaned from Governmental agencies as well as from private welfare agencies handling juvenile work. If records are inadequate then it can be recommended that a permanent record system be set up.

3. It would be advisable to ascertain increases in population of individual communities as a result of wartime changes in the economic status of the city. Likewise there should be considered the corresponding increase or decrease in police personnel.

4. The establishment of a crime prevention unit in the local police agencies is fundamental in order that contributing factors in youthful crime can be ascertained and potential delinquents be discovered prior to their being set on a road to crime. The best qualified officials of the police department should do this work.

5. Whenever there is a large proportion of delinquents in a particular community, a survey should be made to ascertain if there are adequate recreational facilities in those particular sections of the community and if they are adequately supervised.

6. Agencies that now furnish wholesome programs such as schools, churches, private agencies, local departments of community government are to be encouraged to strengthen and revivify this work.

7. Individual communities should endeavor to really emphasize the their schools and churches.
character building functions of

Primarily the duty of training rests with the home. Fathers and mothers should instill in their children at an early age a genuine respect for God and lawful authority. When the home breaks down, others must help these boys and girls.

Grown Up Kids Remember When Santa Came to Carmel

"Christmas for the kids" was Carmel's slogan from the first and the citizenry converged enthusiastically upon the closing exercises of Sunset school, making certain that a gift for each child hung upon the tree, and that Johnny's recitation of The Night Before Christmas was suitably highlighted and set against the proper background of pine boughs and holly berries. Frank Devendorf, Bill Overstreet and Bob Leidig vied with each other to make these occasions momentous, and no Last Day of School was complete without its striped candy cane, the gift of Delos Curtis.

Those were the halcyon days when Pine Inn advertised a super-special Christmas feast for one dollar per plate and Highlands Inn offered the same, plus transportation, humbly suggesting that "reservations in advance would be appreciated." Carolers under the leadership of Thomas Vincent Cator, with Argyll Campbell, Laura Dierrsen and Vasia Anakief singing lustily in the chorus, made their rounds on foot during the early hours of Christmas Eve, finding a Yuletide candle burning brightly in every window of the village.

In 1915 Rev. D. Charles Gardner, then the chaplain of Stanford University, came to conduct the Christmas services at All Saints', and two years later it was announced that "an innovation in Carmel" would be the midnight communion and prayer service held there on Christmas Eve.

The Carmel Community club came into being at the close of World War I and celebrated its first year by holding a vast Christmas community dinner, with dancing and singing at Pine Inn. The following year it invited every child in Carmel to a Christmas Eve party in the Arts and Crafts Hall, advising its guests, "Please do not forget to bring a cushion or pillow that can be used on the floor." That was the year that Mother Carrington advertised frantically in the Pine Cone for the recovery of her lost toy nightingale so that it could be used in the Christmas Toy Symphony —and the year that Superior Judge Dudley Kinsell and his wife came from their Piedmont home to spend the holidays here.

At 7 p.m. on December 24, 1921, the Arts and Crafts club began its season's festivities with a mammoth children's party. There were Old English dances and singing games, a Yule Log, a wassail bowl, carol singers, St. George and the Dragon, a set of mummers, impromptu play acting and Father Christmas. Later the adults indulged in "social dancing," and refreshments, in charge of Mrs. Grace Boke, were dispensed in profusion. So signal was the success of this community gathering, it was promptly adopted as a town custom. In 1922 the program, adapted for young and old, was Ira Remsen's Christmas masque, The Shepherd's Bridge, with John Northern Hilliard taking part and Edward Kuster producing and lighting it. Rhoda Johnson made the costums, Helena Heron and Ernest Schweninger dropped in at an early rehearsal and remained to work themselves to the bone in a hundred capacities. A list of the donors who provided toys for the tree comprised the citizen's roster of Carmel. Nor did community zeal lapse in the years which followed. No Christmas was complete for those who failed to lend a hand in decorating the hall, operating with hammer and nails, collecting and wrapping toys, sewing on costumes or candy bags, coaching the folk dancing and acting in the plays. And everybody was on hand for the gala Twelfth Night revels to applaud the work of such moving spirits as Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter, Austin James, Perry Newberry, Ivy Basham, Jeanne Burton, Fred O. Robbins and the Josselyn although previous to this smaller lighted trees had been set up in front of Leidig's grocery store, Pine Inn and before Delos Curtis' restaurant and candy store. Mrs. Phil K. Gordon and her committee of sponsors saw to it that baskets were placed about the town for weeks ahead, collecting toys and brothers, Winsor and Talbert.

The first community outdoors Christmas tree made its appearance on Ocean avenue in 1926,

Take Fruit Juice With That Turkey To Combat Flu Bug

Though there are 134 cases of influenza in Monterey county last week, according to the County Health Department's report, most of the cases were comparatively mild.

Monterey and Pacific Grove area were the lightest hit with only six cases, Gonzales and Soledad 9, while Salinas area reported 119. Only two cases of pneumonia complicating influenza were reported Dr. Kenneth Sheriff, health officer, said.

To prevent the spread of the disease, Dr. Sheriff urged that people stay home in bed as soon as symptoms appear as the first few hours of the disease is the period at which it is most contagious. He pointed out that dietary indiscretion and over-fatigue may lower resistance against influenza and suggested that the heavy holiday diet should be supplimented with a generous supply of citrus fruits and other fruit juices.

Montani's Mass in E Flat To Be Sung Tonight at Mission

The midnight mass at the Carmel Mission tonight will be preceded by a procession of altar boys from the sacristry to the crib in the center of the mission where a statue of the Infant will be placed amid the images of the Virgin, St. Joseph, the oxen, the ass, and the sheep, a reminder of the first Christmas at Bethlehem. During the procession, the mission choir will sing Christmas carols. Again, during the solemn high mass, the altar boys will appear with lighted candles, making an impressive picture against the poinsettia and holly-decked altar.

Montani's mass in E flat has been chosen by the mission choir for this Christmas' Eve midnight ceremony. Sam J. Miller, bass, Carl Bensberg, tenor, Ruth Cooke, alto, Gladys Young, Blanche Gibbs, Edith and Betty Fonteneau, sopranos make up the choir. In the absence of Noel Sullivan, Craig Nelson from the Del Monte preflight school will play the organ. Lt. J. P. Gittenger and Sgt. Arthur Bradley will be guest singers in the choir.

Admission to the midnight mass will be by card only because seating space is limited in the mission. After members of the parish have been supplied, the remaining tickets may be secured by others by calling for them at the mission. Because of the solemnity of the occasion Father Michael O'Connell asked people to come "properly disposed and becomingly attired, not in formals or evening dress. We shall do our best to accommodate as many as possible, and ask your co-operation."

gifts, so that every child in Carmel would be remembered on Christmas Eve, when the celebration took place. And Superintendent of Public Works Alfred Fraser hustled out a squad of volunteers to sweep and polish Ocean avenue in readiness for the moment when its topmost star sprang into light and Carmel voices, practically 100% strong, joined in the strains of Hark, the Herald Angels Sing.

Santa Claus, Inc., sponsored by the P.T.A. was founded in the following year, and stock was sold, not alone to the business men of the town, but as it should be, to every citizen wishing to insure toys enough for the tree to go around. At 7 o'clock on Christmas Eve the church bells and the school bell chimed out, a clarion call was sounded on the bugle, Fenton Foster signaled to his orchestra, and the caroling began. For every child there was a toy, a candy bag, a balloon, and visits were made with baskets of toys to every home that might have been overlooked by Santa. It was not till 1929, though, that Carmel took steps to erase the memory of the Peake donkeys. That year a committee composed of Henry F. Dickinson, Fenton Foster, Blanche Tolmie and Elliott Durham set as their goal "the handsomest tree in Carmel's history." Joseph Schoeninger was Santa, Frank Sheridan was Master of Ceremonies, Fenton Foster was in charge of music, the tree was decorated by a crew supplied by Hugh Comstock and Tom Reardon.

Only one hitch occurred. Henry Dickinson had rigged up a snowstorm. All was in readiness. The signal was given. Breathlessly the crowd awaited. It fell—but oh, alas, up instead of down! Notwithstanding, it was a noble snowstorm.

And from the stables of Bettie Greene came a docile equine, bearing antlers that stayed in place this time.

the mosquitoes extended their activities from the Mission Tract, outside the city limits, to the Eighty Acres, within the city limits, they passed into the jurisdiction of Fred Godwin, Commissioner of Health and Safety for the City of Carmel, who backed by a determined, outraged, bitten and bumpy citizenry can add a new note to the plaintive wails that the County Health Department has grown so accustomed to receiving from the Mission Tract that it no longer hears.

In fact, with Fred Godwin's voice in its official capacity added to the chorus, the song may take on such a menacing tone that the County Health Department may bolster up its flabby efforts at mosquito control and go to work in earnest at cleaning up the mosquito breeding places in the Mission Tract.

Therefore, we respectfully submit the suggestion that Commissioner of Health and Safety Godwin start roaring.

Mrs. Lyon Speaks on Fuchsias at Garden Section Meeting

By KATHRYN LANSDOWNE

On Friday, December 17, Miss Anne Grant invited the Garden Section of the Carmel Woman's club to hold its monthly meeting at her home on Hatton Road. She is recognized as an expert on gardening, a charter member of the section, and has shown unfailing interest in its work ever since the section was organized several years ago. Hers is one of the prize gardens in Carmel.

Mrs. D. E. Nixon arranged a beautiful setting, indicative of the season, using a statue of the Madonna against leaves of a rubber plant which she had covered with tinsel snow. Mrs. Hugh Comstock brought a specimen of Chimonanthisus, known more commonly as winter sweet. This shrub came from China originally. It has clusters of waxlike blossoms which are very fragrant, and is a very rare variety of shrub.

Miss Grant displayed a species of begonia which she says is called "kitchen begonia," derived from the fact that it is generally seen growing in a flower pot in a kitchen window. It has blooms or blossoms of paper white in the shape of calla lilies.

Mrs. Lawrence Lyon of Pacific Grove was the speaker on the program. Her talk was prefaced very appropriately by a few lines of poetry:

"Unless my palm may press the soil,
Unless my hand may pull the weed,
Unless my brow be damp with toil
The garden is not mine indeed."

Mrs. Lyon referred to the American Fuchsia society, organized in 1929, in telling of their culture and varieties. Up to 1942 there were three thousand named varieties and during the past year thirty more have been named. The fuchsia is a perennial and sometimes grows up to the height of sixteen to eighteen feet. It thrives in Carmel climate as it cannot produce abundantly where the sun is too hot. The more common kind and the easiest to grow is the red and purple which was developed in 1788. Fuchsias, with their unusual combinations of color and graceful form are a favorite with lovers of flowers. Mrs. Lyon invited the section as a group to visit her garden when the fuchsias are in full bloom, and concluded,

"Whoever makes a garden
Walks hand in hand with God."

XMAS EVE CAROLS

Carmel Church of the Wayfarer will hold a Christmas Eve Carol Service on Friday night from eleven to midnight. The origin of the carols will be described by the Pastor, Dr. James Crowther, and then sung by the congregation. This lovely and popular shrine of worship with its chancel lights will be an ideal setting for the greeting of Christmas. It is a Public Service for family gatherings. Service men and their families are specially invited. Visitors are cordially welcome.

The Light of the World Is in the Eyes of Our Children

Our children who are too young to realize how War changes Christmas, have the same starry look of wonderment and the light of belief in their eyes, this Christmas, as children always have at Christmas time.

And from the light in our children's eyes, we catch a reassuring spark of light, a new belief, too—and we can say, "Many Christmases" and "Happy New Year"—wishing it wholeheartedly for the whole world.

HUMOR FOR EXPORT

BY EDWARD KUSTER

"Here comes Laughter
Shaking both his sides . . ."

National pride, the sociologists are agreed, is in its essence "reflex self-esteem." When individual self-respect passes into the category of vanity, virtue goes out of it. So may a national belief pass into the stage of fetichism, and through its invulnerability to the shafts of truth become vicious and dangerous. More often it becomes merely absurd.

We are pretty much agreed that our never-failing "sense of humor" surpasses that of other peoples. Yet nearly all of us fail to see the point of that gigantic cosmic jòke, deep-rooted in humanity and timeless, that search where we will, albeit to the outermost reaches of the earth, we shall find every nation looking with this self-same pitying contempt on the feeble and difficult humor of the rest of the world!

for us a post-war plan, nothing less than that

In Washington our betters are preparing we of the New World, a sort of parvenu "Herrenvolk," are to "re-educate Europe" toward at least an approximation of the almost-too-perfect way of life which we have been selfishly enjoying. Well, so be it, but let us be sure that the curriculum of re-education includes a course in Basic Humor.

Take France, for example, her literature and national life so ponderous, so lacking in gaiety and grace! For her a primary course in real fun should include a large dosage of Mutt and Jeff and Pop-eye the Sailor. We could then gradually introduce the subtle and delicate wheezes of Abbott and Costello, American "box-office champions" for 1942 (believe it or not!), finishing with a graduate course in the Marx Brothers.

In Italy, for twenty dull and long-faced centuries deficient in any recognizable humor-sense, we would begin the inoculation of honest-to-goodness fun with compulsory attendance on the Mack Sennett custard-pie school of film comedy, progressing up the scale through the color-supplement comic strips and topping off with some of the infinite variations of that side-splitting classic of ours, "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?"

In the case of Germany—whatever may be left of that barbarous and unhappy country after the aerial bombs of British Empire and American Democracy have finished pulverizing it—re-education in humor will of course be indefintely postponed. German laughter and joy of life must wait—who knows but that henceforth generations of German babies will be born with only a rudimentary funny-bone? For is it not written that "the iniquities of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation?"

Russia? Oh yes, Russia. Well, maybe we'd better not even try to re-educate Russia—particularly in the science of Government. In fact, disturbing rumor has it that the ladies and gentlemen of Soviet Russia entertain hopes of ultimately re-educating us! At the moment they have 19,000,000 well-equipped young professors under appointment. I am uneasily reminded at this point of a famous story out of the Crimean War. (Perhaps I should mention that "peace-loving" England and "peace-loving" Russia were hard at it in 1855, popping away at each other for dear life). It appears that in the heat of battle a British soldier called out to his superior officer, "I've caught a Tartar, sir." "Well then," barked the superior, "bring him in." "But he won't let me!" replied the bewildered redcoat. "Catching a Tartar" became a byword all over the world—it's forgotten now, if indeed the younger generation in America has ever heard of it. We, or they, may have to trot it out again and re-learn its meaning. Take another look at the inscrutable smile of Mr. Joe Stalin and recall the grim wise-crack of Napoleon, "Scratch a Russian and you will find a Tartar!"

Inadvertent mention of Russia, the Bear that Walks Like a Man (the expression is Kipling's, not mine), has suddenly taken the savor out of my jolly post-war plan for developing Europe's deficient sense of humor. From now on let us be serious.

Consider the British Isles, England in particular. Recently we saw on the local screen two excellent film comedies, each fairly representative of the everyday humor of the country of its origin. "Missing Ten Days" was English. "You Belong to Me" was American. I paid close attention to audience comment as well as to the content of the two pictures. Some were delighted by the underplayed, tongue-in-cheek incongruities besetting a young Englishman, victim of amnesia, who awoke to find himself the be-"tailed" butler of a swank Parisian household and be-capped chauffeur to its lovely daughter. They enjoyed no less the uproarious clowning and tomfoolery of the young American of the other film who impetuously married a brilliant woman doctor and thereafter tormented himself ludicrously with jealous terrors.

The idea dawned (by now I have confirmed my impression by delving into Max Eastman's "The Enjoyment of Laughter") that at the bottom of the English comedy lay irony, whereas the essence of the American piece was exaggeration. Myself deriving keen pleasure from both yarns, I was surprised to learn that many of my fellow-townspeople had found the English film highly entertaining as melodarama but incomprehensible in its comedy; while numbers of my local English friends sat in stony aloofness through the American picture, looking down their superior British noses at the absurd antics of Mr. Henry Fonda in his excellent portrayal of the distressed consort of a busy career woman.

On the authority of Mr. Eastman's monumental work I may say here that the above analysis of the two pictures seems to be on the right track. Broad nonsense and exaggeration in the American film, irony and understatement in the English production. But why should enjoyment of the one ever, for anyone, exclude enjoyment of the other? Why not condition ourselves to take delight in all these good things, just as we take pleasure in the toasted English muffin without in the least impairing our taste for the succulent American waffle?

For, if we do not grasp even the humor of our English friends, whose thoughts are clothed in the same language as our own (or nearly so), how can we hope that Western Europe, already suspicious of our motives and contemptuous of our self-assurance, will permit us—even at the risk of its physical starvation—to tinker unsympathetically and clumsily with its entire ancient culture?

Manifestly, to fail at our self-appointed task of re-shaping the Old World would be just too, too bad! We might even be compelled to return to the difficult business of education here at home, and to the solution of other domestic problems too gigantic for the so-busy Administration to contemplate just now. For instance, the formulation of a plan for the swift post-war abolition of oppressive executive-bureau "directives" and a restoration of the United States of America to life under law, administrated by the courts as guaranteed by the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Returning to the subject of humor: I hope that this letter has not seemed to imply that the enjoyment of the native fun of foreign lands should be merely one of the lesser means to a farflung political end, however showily altruistic and consciously noble the latter. I earnestly sug-

LEGEND OF CHRISTMAS EVE

The road lay bleak and winter-wet
With littered leaves and pools of rain
Too newly-fallen to forget
The star-awaiting sky—

When streaming through the sunset air
On golden avenues of flight . . .
Could it be angels everywhere
Who came so straight, so swift and fair
Flaming among the pines?

No, it was not a miracle . . .
It was as though the heart had sight!
Suddenly over hushed Carmel
A pure and soundless music fell;
And down the dark December sky,
Through all earth's tears and tragedy,
There came the voices, singing the high
Hosannahs of the night!

HE SENDS A CHILD

O little shining child!
Whom ages have adored
And saints and kings revered
And hailed as Lord . . .

Not only on that night
Beneath that winter star
Did holy pity speak—
Such things still are . . .

How often to this earth,
When all is dark and wild,
With deep-perceiving love
He sends a child!

Fine Choral Work Big Attraction at Xmas Pageant

Eighty well trained voices opened the Christmas program Monday afternoon and Tuesday evening at Sunset auditorium. Dressed in white choir robes, the Sunset students grouped in tiers around Frank McClain at the piano in the orchestra pit, and led by Angie Machado, sang Old Christmas Song, Mary's Lullaby and The First Noel very beautifully.

The high school choir of twenty also contributed generously to the enjoyment of the program by furnishing background music for the play.

Why the Chimes Rang, a dramatization from the story by Raymond Alden, is especially designed to delight children with its theatrical change of setting from shadowy interior of a woodchopper's hut to the glowing beauty of a candle lit altar backed by a cathedral stained glass window, the pageantry of courtiers and their ladies bringing their offerings of gold and jewels, and the big moment when the little boy timidly offers his modest gift and forthwith the chimes ring! If adults find themselves squirming at the threadbare theme, they should remember that the story is excitingly new to the youngsters (the auditorium was packed with kindergarteners to seventh graders Monday) and bear up in patience.

Elaborate preparations were made for staging the play. Ernest Calley's and Bob Siemons' thoroughly convincing fire in the woodchopper's fireplace with realistic dancing flame shadows was the hit of the first scene. Lovely and fresh in color was the cathedral window designed by Kim Carlton. Lucile Burtis, assisted by Fred Clarke, Martin Irwin, Bob Siemons and June Walker created the pleasing effect of the two sets. Adding color and pageantry were the costumes designed by Gale Marhofke, Betty Bolton, June Quinn and Anne Casati. The heavy responsibility of seeing to a thousand details fell on Ann Bates who proved a most efficient stage director. Properties were smoothly handled by Patricia Post and Molly Osgood. The entire production was under the direction of Alberta Beeson, high school dramatic coach.

It seems almost too much to expect the small voices of children to do battle with the acoustical difficulties of Sunset Auditorium. In this play, as in so many school productions here, some of the voices survived, and some expired in the high gothic arches that have produced a sweat of apprehension on more than one Bach Festival soloist.

Those players that could be heard showed an appreciation and understanding of the lines they interpreted indicating there is dramatic talent among the young people and arousing the hope in drama starved Carmel that the students might put on some plays for adult enjoyment in the high school cafeteria during the winter.

Jon Stark played Steen in Monday's production, Peter Caine filled the part Tuesday night. John Haussermann and Fritz Westerhout alternated in the part of Holger. Jim Jensen played Uncle Bertel, Claire Warner, the old woman, Bonnie Dee Olson, the angel, Bob Jensen, a man, Oliver Bassett, the priest, Martha Moller, a courtier, Adele Thompson, a woman, Wynn Hutchins, a scholar, Mary Gregory, a girl and Francis Shea, a king.

Assisting as ushers were Joan Carr, Suzita Cecil, Bonnie Fish, Ann Gambee, Joan Penoyer and Carol Walker. The handsome linoleum cut on the program cover was the work of Martin Irwin. Posters were designed by Barbara Bolin. The reed organ played behind scenes by Frank McClain as an accompaniment to the high school chorus was lent by All Saints Church. —Wilma Cook

Playhouse Offers Comedies Over Xmas Holidays

For its Christmas film the Playhouse has made a happy choice in "Life Begins at 8:30," a gay and tender comedy starring Monty Woolley, brilliantly supported by Ida Lupino and a great cast. From the opening sequences depicting Woolley as Santa Claus in a department store to the final inimitable give-and-take between Woolley and Sara Allgood the film supplies entertainment of a high order. It will open tonight, with a Christmas matinee tomorrow at two thirty, and will end Sunday night. Two complete programs every evening.

The post-Christmas picture starting Tuesday and running three days, will be the extraordinary blend of mirth and fantasy, "The Remarkable Andrew." Brian Donlevy, as the spirit of "Old Hickory" General Andrew Jackson, seventh President of the United States, gives the best performance of his career. William Holden and Ellen Drew play the two young moderns whose lives come under the influence of the remarkable "Andy." An able cast supports, with excellent handling by Director Irving Pichel, who won his spurs during Golden Bough days and is well known by Carmel oldtimers.

7 Home Nursing Graduates Get Pins Thursday

By FRANCES DOUD

Miss Jane Burritt, chairman of Carmel Chapter of American Red Cross, presented pins and certificates to the graduates of the latest Home Nursing Class at Red Cross Headquarters on Thursday afternoon. Present also at the informal ceremony were Miss Helen Heavey, vice-chairman of the chapter, Mrs. Hobart Prince, chairman of Volunteer Services, Miss Leslie King, executive secretary of the chapter, and Mrs. Walker Lenahan, instructor of Home Nursing.

After the presentation tea was served by the graduates amid charming Christmas decorations.

Members of the class were Mrs. J. A. Williams, Miss Cornelia Armsby, Mrs. Alberte Margoliash, Mrs. A. G. Murphy, Mrs. A. A. Watson, Mrs. Inga Melbo, Mrs. Paula Waterman.

Miss Burritt stressed the importance of having a Home Nursing graduate in every possible home because of crowded conditions in hospitals and shortage of trained nurses available for private duty. She urges that women interested in this course sign up at headquarters at once so that a new class may be started at the earliest possible date.

Katherine Champlin

Word was received this week of the death in Pasadena on Thursday, December 16, of Miss Katherine Champlin, well-known in Carmel where she and her two sisters owned a home on Camino Real and Thirteenth, in which it was their custom through many years to spend their summers.

Miss Champlin is survived by a brother, who makes his home in Chicago, and two sisters, Miss Ada Bell Champlin and Miss Jeanette Champlin.

Monterey Peninsula War Chest Advisory Board
City Hall, Monterey

The Editor,
Carmel Pine Cone
Carmel, California

On behalf of the Monterey Peninsula Community and War Chest, I wish to take this, the occasion of the official closing of the campaign, to thank most sincerely the thousands of individual donors—both large and small, for their generous support of the Community and War Chest which now enables the Campaign Committee to report contributions and pledges totaling $72,000, which has exceeded the quota set for the Peninsula.

I also want to specifically thank the Naval, Military and Coast Guard personnel within our community, for their very great generosity in the support of the War Chest, which has helped so materially in "putting us over the top."

Lastly, I wish to express my deep appreciation to the many individuals in Monterey, East Monterey, Pacific Grove, Carmel, Carmel Valley, the Country Club, Big Sur and Pebble Beach, who by their leadership of various groups, or who by their personal solicitations, have made our success possible.

Sincerely,
Mark G. Keller, President

Dear Sir:

May I correct an error in an article you copied from a Los Gatos paper? It said "at that time" (when Perry Newberry arrived in Carmel) there were no hotels, but the Hotel Carmelo was running in 1903 quite a while before he came. This hotel resembled an ordinary two-story dwelling and was located on the corner of Junipero and Ocean. It should not be confused with the Hotel Carmel which, later, occupied the corner of San Carlos and Ocean. In 1904 the Hotel Carmelo was moved down Ocean avenue to Lincoln. Additions were made to it and it became the Pine Inn.

The impression that is given every time an opportunity occurs that the desire to keep Carmel primitive was unanimous is erroneous. It is correct that some seemed to derive elation from groping in the dark, stumbling in the ruts and getting tangled up in the bushes but there were others, including the Carmel Development Co. and myself who were boosting for progress. I quote from one of their early folders:

"We are crowding the improvements."

They had visions of the railroad extending around from Pacific Grove to Carmel and hoped the trolley cars would extend over the hill from Monterey to Carmel also.

Very respectfully,

Thank you, Mr. Slevin. We're glad you caught it. It slipped by us. We appreciate, also, the glimpses you give into early Carmel, knowing that your many years in business here and your active interest in community affairs give you a greater knowledge of the history of the town than we, relative new comers, could hope to have. —W. Monterey Failed In Hospitality Toward Hurricane Monterey looked with some disgust upon the Big Wind that visited it last week, and upon the damage it did to the fishing fleet, but according to the Houston Texas Post that is no way to receive a hurricane.

Judge Dudley Kinsell brought the Pine Cone-Cymbal a clipping from the Post which indicated that Houstonians not only show the proper spirit of hospitality toward a hurricane by throwing their houses open to it, but are so disappointed when they prepare for one and it misses them by fifty miles, as happened recently, that they "damn the weather man."

According to the Post, which tells its story in verse, Houston citizens prepare for a hurricane by climbing on their roofs with hammers and chisels to pry up a shingle here and there. They wait for the hurricane to arrive, and blow their houses full of rain so they can collect insurance for the damage to walls, floors, and furniture.

The Post does have the grace to qualify the story with "according to the insurance men" and to add that it hopes it isn't true.

Brailowsky Shows Great Artistry In Chopin Group

By ANNE ROBERTS

Last Sunday afternoon at Sunset Auditorium the second concert of the winter series was presented by the Carmel Music Society.

The artist was the Russian pianist, Alexander Brailowsky, who is not unknown to Carmel audiences as he appeared here several years ago. There is no doubt that Mr. Brailowsky is an artist of unquestionable stature, though Sunday's performance was hardly an example of the superb playing of which he is capable.

The program opened with a Vivaldi Concerto, then an A Major Sonata of Scarlatti followed by an E flat Sonata of Beethoven. The first two were played in a style of larger and heavier scope than one expects for those early Italian masters. The Beethoven, for the most part, lacked color and contrast.

Chopin is the field where the artist really excels, for with his complete understanding and vast store of brilliant virtuosity, he recreates the most hackneyed boarding school Chopin into a thing of joy and beauty, such as the G Minor Ballade, the A flat Polonaise, and finally the Minute Waltz which was played as an encore.

The last group was devoted to Rachmaninoff, Debussy, Villa Lobas and closed triumphantly with the much played Marche Militaire of Schubert.

To this reviewer, with the exception of the D flat Nocturne of Chopin, most of his playing seemed imbued with a feverish haste incompatible with cherished memories of his other performances.

The encores which he gave most generously were: The Waltzes in E Minor and D Flat of Chopin, G Minor Prelude of Rachmaninoff and one of Chopin Ecco Saises.

The recital was well attended and most enthusiastically received.

She left the house the very instant and never came near there again.

Another Visitor "Tells All" About Carmel—Ho—Hum

People get the oddest ideas about Carmel. Ted Goodwin, a reporter for the Longview, Oregon Daily News spent several days here recently and when he returned home, wrote us up for his paper. By TED GOODWIN
Daily News Special Writer

Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif. — The fortunes of war bring me here for a couple of days. Strange are my thoughts as I walk the lovely streets of Carmel. This is the mecca of artists, writers, screwball philosophers, brilliant historians, brave officers and devoted golfers. It is also the one time alleged hideaway of an absentee lady evangelist and a missing radio operator. Beyond doubt it is the snug harbor of navy wives and a well feathered love nest of military personnel for the duration. City of refuge for moneyed English and non Aryan escapees of Europe, Carmel seems to have everything this side of paradise for those who fall for its spell.

We grant the charm of the place; the cypresses and the pines, the eucalptus and the bougainvillea, the aroma scented air and the long whispered sigh of the sea.

Church holds no prayer meeting on Wednesday night. I doubt if many of the Carmelities of this day and age do much praying.

Real estate is booming. Army and navy officers are buying homes here. Even vacant lots are selling with plans for building to go ahead as soon as the war drums cease to roll.

Comfort is paramount and leisure is normal at Carmel. Nobody wants to work. Stores theoretically open at eight in the morning. Customers appear at 10, clad in slacks, shorts, chenille jackets, bath slippers or plus fours. Ladies of Carmel acquire a tan and what a tan. Deep walnut brown is the coveted shade of beach tan.

Last night I browsed in Carmel's library. A delightful place of books with everything from Freud to salvation. The readers here are definitely of the comfortable intelligentsia. There is no evidence of hungry readers struggling upward toward the light. They seem to have too much light. A lot of them wear smoked glasses.

Carmel has a local newspaper. There I found fellowship. To find the pulse of a community I always go to the Newspaper office. The sheet that blows in the wind here is a brainy tabloid called the Carmel Pine Cone-Cymbal, a paper that tells plenty but is too discreet to tell too much. Their reporter gave me a nice "blow" for a transient columnist. They seemed to think I fit into the Carmel scene because of some of my unusualities. All I need is a beret on my head.

I love the hotels and chop houses of Carmel. My hotel has a Moorish tower and clay tiles on the roof. Some sweet day when peace returns, I hope to bring Mama to La Ribera at Carmel. She would be intrigued by the stores with their box stall racing stable doors and horrified by the tap room signs and cocktail lounges. And, to tell the truth, I would like Carmel better without them. I'm glad to be going to Prineville, Oregon.

No First Theatre Show This Weekend

The First Theatre will have no showing of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" this week-end, as the Troupers of the Gold Coast are spending their Christmas at home.

Next week, however, refreshed and ready for any thing, the Troupers promise the best yet in their annual New Year's Eve performance—a gala evening which has become a tradition and a feature of Monterey Peninsula entertainment.

Following the New Year's Eve performance, all former Troupers of the Gold Coast are invited to drop in at the First Theatre, in Jack Swan's historic bar-room, any time between eleven and two a.m. for the Gold Coasters' annual "At Home."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included ,which reads as follows: "Is there more than one school of Christian Science? Christmas will be happier at Fort Ord Station Hospital for 450 sick soldiers because of the cooperation of a number of Carmel organizations and shops, Mrs. R. R. Wallace, chairman of the Camp and Hospital Committee of the Red Cross, said yesterday.

She especially expressed her gratitude to Bundles for America, American Legion Auxiliary, the Carmel Woman's Club, Chevrolet Victory Service League and those shops in Carmel which filled orders and contributed gifts, the surgical dressing unit for the loan of their work room and the Carmel Red Cross Chapter which assisted in every respect and to all those volunteers who gave of their time to help tie and wrap gifts.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

An Unexpected Christmas Gift

Recently we in Carmel Hi were surprised and very much pleased at an offer made by Miss E. K. Tompkins. Miss Tompkins, a former teacher, was going back to New York City to live with her sister. She suggested that some one from the school office come to her home and select from her private library the books that would be most useful to the school library.

The books listed are a few of the most interesting of the 82 chosen by Mrs. Jane Down, the representative of the school.

The teachers, history and language teachers especially, as well as the students, are extremely delighted with this gift. And no matter how far Miss Tompkins travels we of Carmel High will always remember and be duly grateful for her thoughtfulness. Here are some of the books:

Latin: Lewis, Latin Dictionary for Schools; Holmes, Caesar, De Bello Gallico and Caesar's Conquest of Gaul in English; Pliny, Letters; Ovid, Metamorprosis; Caesar in Gaul; Coesar's Commentaries; Cicero's Orations.

German: Heinrich Heine, Buch Der Lieder, Reisebilder; Grieb, English and German Dictionary, German and English Dictionary; French-English Dictionary; English-French Dictionary; Davis, Readings in Ancient History; Bryce, The American Commonwealth Vol I & Vol. II; Several books on English and Greek History.

—June Quinn.

Rally Precedes Game

A rally was held Friday during the noon hour out in the bleachers. The main event was the drilling of the Carmel Cadet Corps. This occasion marked the debut of our military organization, and was very well done for a first public appearance. An honored guest at the drill was Col. G. W. Stuart, U. S. Army, Ret., who, after the drill was completed, presented Everett May with a First Lieut.'s commission. Everett is the first of the cadets to receive a commission in the corps.

The next event was the presentation by Mr. Getsinger to the students of a large photograph of the late Otto Bardarson. Russell Bohlke accepted the photograph for the students and displayed it for all of us to see. It is an excellent picture of Mr. Bardarson sitting on the corridor railing and gazing towards the hills and the river. The picture will be hung in the office.

The last part of the rally was devoted to yells and a speech by Coach Rudd concerning the games to be played with Salinas later in the afternoon. This has been one of the most successful of our rallies; first, because of the excellent program, and second, because it was held but two hours before the actual game. The yell leaders did not have a lethargic audience then.

The Bardarson Memorial Fund Game

Last Friday afternoon, the game between Salinas and Carmel for the Bardarson Memorial Fund was played. There was a large turnout of students and parents, and the players were playing just as hard as if it were a league game.

The lightweights started the fireworks. The Salinas Lightweights were just a few points ahead of the Carmel Lightweights all through the game until the last few minutes, when the Carmel boys started to apply pressure and Capt. Art Templeman evened the score with a couple of "swish bucket shots." But, the game was not over, and in the few remaining seconds the Salinas Lightweights came back with two more scoring points to win the game. The final score was 30-26.

The Heavyweights' game told a different story. The Carmel Padres held the lead from the beginning of the game to the end. Although the Salinas coach, at frequent intervals, kept putting in a fresh string, the Carmel boys with just two or three fresh men held their own. Capt. Russ Bohlke totaled up nineteen points alone for the Padres, which brought the game to a close with a score of 44-49.

It was a good game and the money which was taken in, $81.12 went toward a good cause.

Everybody payed or contributed in one way or the other. The Salinas boys contributed their time, the referees contributed their services, the Carmel players paid to participate in the game, with teachers, students, and parents adding their share toward the fund. —Emile Passailaigue

The Winter Ball

The traditional Winter Ball was held last Saturday. The formal dance began at 8:30 with students and patrons dancing to the music of the five piece orchestra and enjoying the fine refreshments consisting of cake and punch.

The Cafeteria, where the dance was held, was decorated very beautifully with a Christmas tree in one corner and with wreaths on the walls. This gave the dance a festive Christmas spirit.

The success of the Winter Ball was the result of hard labor on the part of the students and committees in charge of decorations, refreshments, and clean-up. Betty Powell was the chairman of decorations and chose as her committee the following: Carla Lepori, Jo An Thorn, Russell Bohlke, Mary Jane Reel, Nancy Fitzhugh, and Barbara Bolin. The Junior class took care of the refreshments and did an excellent job. Russell Bohlke was head of clean-up. On his committee were Everett May, Dick Uzzell, Jo An Thorn, and Barbara Bolin. Many thanks go to these committees and to Miss Sheldon for her help and patience in making the dance a success. We also appreciate the attendance of the sponsors, who were Mr. Calley, Miss Sheldon, Coach Rudd and Mrs. Rudd, Mr. Getsinger, and Mr. and Mrs. Williams.

Dr. Van Niel's Lecture

On Friday, December 10th both the biology classes of Carmel high school gathered in the Science room for a lecture given by Dr. Van Niel, who specializes in the life processes carried on by green plants.

A struggle for three hundred and fifty years has been in progress to discover how plants function. During this time many new facts have been discovered and although years of research lie ahead for the men of science, quite a lot is known about the subject of photosynthesis. The first experiments to learn how plants grow were carried out in the 16th century. They caused a few people to think about plants then, but nothing much was done until the 18th century when many great strides were made in the field.

It was proved that life can not exist without green plants. From man to the smallest microbe green plants are directly concerned with keeping them alive by furnishing both food and oxygen. Chorophyll, which is the green coloring matter in leaves, traps the sunlight and makes energy. Exactly how this is done is not yet known. However, with this energy from the sun plants can manufacture all they need, and are entirely self-sufficient. This is not true of all animals which depend upon many of the elements in plants vital for life; the changing of foul air to good air for the use of animals is also preformed by the plants which give off oxygen as a by product.

Scientists, constantly experimenting, are finding out new truths, and it is hoped that someday this entire puzzle will be put together with all the material possible having been gathered on the complicated subject of food making. —Gail Campbell

Christmas Luncheon

A Christmas luncheon was given Wednesday, Dec. 23, for the students of Carmel high school.

Mrs. Clark, head of the cafeteria, said there would be plenty of turkey, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, special holly cake, milk, salad, and rolls for all. She was right.

After the feast a program of Christmas Carols and community singing was given. Every one had fun. —Betty Lou Fonteneau

Yes, you can help fill the ships and keep them sailing out the Golden Gate...by practicing rigid wartime economy in your home. Your Government asks you to conserve and save for Victory. That means waste and extravagance must be cut to minimum. Even where there is no rationing and the supply is plentiful and the cost has not risen, use only what you need and no more.
This is true of gas and electricity. Though plentiful and cheap, they must be used wisely to save manpower, transportation, fuel and critical metals. By more conservative use of gas and electricity you prolong the life of your appliances, obtain more efficient operation and help avoid replacement and repair of these esssntials to your comfort, convenience and health.
This company has pledged full support to the government in the national conservation program. We urge our customers to help through voluntary cooperation.

Miss Agnese Charite Dempsey became the bride of Lieutenant Ralph William Martineau, in a ceremony performed at St. Gregory's church in Los Angeles on Saturday, December 18. Miss Dempsey was attired in white taffeta, with bodice effect and bouffant skirt with a short train and finger length veil of tulle. She carried a shower spray of bouvardia, gladiola buds and white orchids.

A reception and luncheon at the Chapman Park Hotel followed the ceremony and the young couple departed on a honeymoon in southern California. After the war, they plan to make their home in Arizona.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Arthur Dempsey of New York and Carmel and the late James Arthur Dempsey and the sister of Lt. Richard John Dempsey, U.S.N.R. Lieut. Martineau is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Martineau of Cleveland, Ohio.
